Call for Papers

The Department of Political Science, Galsi Mahavidyalaya in association with the Kalinga Institute of Indo-Pacific Studies(KIIPS) & in collaboration with Gushkara Mahavidyalaya, Purba Bardhaman and the IQAC, Galsi Mahavidyalaya is going to organize an International Conference on The Indian Model : Federalism, Pluralism and Democratic Resilience in a Divided World on March 6-7, 2026. On this occasion all academicians, scholars and students belonging to the broader family of Social Sciences and Humanities are hereby cordially invited to take active participation in person and present their research papers to make the endeavour a huge success.

Concept Note

Federalism in India has served as a foundational mechanism for accommodating the country's extraordinary social, linguistic, cultural, and religious diversity within a single democratic framework. Through constitutional recognition of multiple identities, linguistic reorganization of states, and decentralization of power, the Indian state has institutionalized pluralism rather than suppressing it. This accommodation of diversity, further strengthened by multilevel governance structures and participatory democratic practices, has enabled the peaceful articulation of regional and identity-based aspirations within constitutional boundaries. In contrast to many societies where diversity has precipitated authoritarian consolidation or violent exclusion, India's experience demonstrates how inclusive and adaptable political institutions can transform heterogeneity into a source of democratic resilience.

Over the past seven and a half decades, this federal and plural democratic architecture has challenged conventional theories about the preconditions for democratic survival. Despite deep socio-economic inequalities and cultural fragmentation, Indian democracy has displayed remarkable endurance, adaptability, and continuity. While not without shortcomings and internal contradictions, India's democratic journey affirms that democracy can thrive amid profound diversity when governance structures are responsive, institutions are inclusive, and political practices are anchored in the historical and cultural realities of society. By critically engaging with this experience, the seminar seeks to deepen understanding of democratic resilience and explore how the Indian model may offer insights for a world confronting democratic backsliding, ideological rigidity, and growing intolerance.

This seminar seeks to examine "The Indian Way" as an inclusive democratic model relevant to a fragmented global order characterized by weakening multilateralism, rising nationalist populism, and eroding liberal norms. By engaging with India's knowledge traditions, federal arrangements, and democratic practices, the seminar aims to assess how diversity has been negotiated within a constitutional framework and what lessons this holds for societies grappling with ethnic conflict, authoritarianism, and cultural exclusion. Through scholarly dialogue and comparative analysis, the seminar will critically evaluate both the achievements and contradictions of Indian democracy, explore its relevance for the Global South, and generate insights and policy recommendations for strengthening inclusive governance and pluralism in contemporary democracies worldwide.
